Collapses at Window With Her, and Doctor and Firemen Come

While firemen and spectators were wondering what had become of Mrs. James Demorest, seventy, at a fire that destroyed the grocery store of Clifford Demorest & Co. in Tenafly, N. J., early yeaterday, the Rev. Lesie Vickars range a ladder to the second story above the store, where Mrs. Demorest lived. A few minutes later he staggered to a window with the unconscious form of Mrs. Demorest in his arms. There he collapsed. Dr. J. M. Mackellar range to the ladder and brought Mrs. Demorest to the street. The minister was brought down by firemen.

The physician revived Mrs. Demorest, and the Rev. Vickars went home.
Others who escaped were James Delahanty, his wife and two children, Mrs. Lydia Ann Bedi, seventy, and her daughter. Miss Delia Bell, ferty.

of Loot.

After having been taken through Harlem and Washington Heights by Joseph Cardone, sixteen years old, of Passaic, N. J., who pointed out many homes he had robbed, Detectives Stein and Curtayne to-day were searching for two men who, the youngster says, taught him to become a burglar.

Joseph's life story is somewhat similar to that of Oliver Twist. Cast out to her own apartments and locked her in.

Then he took $300 worth of goods belonging to the Tillmans.

After robbing the home of David Van Gerderon in St. James's Court, No. 2460 Seventh avenue, he was going down the fire-escape when some one in an adjoining apartment began shotting at him. The boy returned the fire.

Cardone came upon the three-year-old daughter of Mrs. Wallace E. Brigham when he was robbing her home at No. 2776 Eighth avenue. The child began to cry. He soothed the child and talked with her for ten minutes, then gathered up $460 worth of jewelry and clothing and escaped.

A list of some of the places robbed by Cardone, according to his confession, and the value of the articles stolen, follows:

Robert Horz, No. 145 West One Hundred and Forty-fourth street, $300; John Buller, No. 252 West One Hundred and Forty-clighth street, $300; John Buller, No. 211 West One Hundred and Forty-second street; Harry Futerman, No. 230 West One Hundred and Forty-second street; Harry Futerman, No. 230 West One Hundred and Forty-second street; Harry Futerman, No. 230 West One Hundred and Forty-second street; Harry Futerman, No. 230

While robbing the apartments of Charles A. Taylor, a newspaper man of No. 236 West One Hundred and Forty-ninth street, Cardone was met by Mr. and Mrs. Taylor. He backed them against a wall with his revolver, took everything of value he could find and fied down the fire-escape, LONG LIST OF BURGLARIES GIVEN TO POLICE.
